Dénia blends the best products from the sea and the vegetable gardens of Valencia, bringing true examples of the variety and delicacy of the Mediterranean diet. A highlight is the red prawn of Dénia, or the unique "arròs a banda", among other culinary specialties that combine tradition and quality, such as "espencat" (roasted vegetables: pepper, tomato, aubergine and onion), "llandeta de pescado", "suquet de peix", eel or monkfish "All i pebre"; sea urchin, dry octopus, among many other dishes.

These succulent dishes can be enjoyed at the city's more than 300 restaurants. A few examples include:

Directions

Nearby airports

You can fly to the airport of Valencia, which is 113 kilometres away from Dénia, in the municipality of Manises, or you can travel to the airport of "El Altet" in Alicante, which is located about 100 kilometres from Dénia.

El Trenet de la Marina

The Trenet de la Marina is a very popular and traditional means of transport that has been circulating in the north of the province of Alicante for almost a century. You can take the "trenet" from the Mercado Central station or at the Alicante Marina Station.

By road (car and bus)

The AP-7 motorway, popularly known as the Motorway of the Mediterranean, also crosses the Autonomous Community of Valencia. Travellers driving here should know that Dénia has very good connections to other motorways, such as the one mentioned above, since they connect it to the cities of Madrid and Barcelona, in addition to the countries of the Mediterranean basin.

You can also travel to Dénia by bus, since many cities offer coach services that cover this route.
